A Favored Lover.

A carved screen of oak so tall
It well-nigh hides the paneled wall, Save where the moonbeams' ethereal rays
Along the frieze with antique grace.

I cross the floor and peer between The lattice leaves that form the screen,
And find alone a bit of lace,
A satin fan with a painted face.

I turn to go, and lo! my feet Crush out a perfume vague and sweet From violets my lady's gown
With proud indifference swept down.

Poor purple hints of the Spring,
Slipped, scattered from the snowy string, Beneath my feet your lives depart,
As she may trample on my heart.

She comes! the curtains close behind That face so cruel or so kind;
The luminous eyes of azure rare Glean softly through their fringes fair.

So palm to palm in friendly wise,
Just hearts that speak through greeting eyes,
And cheeks that flush, and lips that press
A whispered word to silence—"Yes!"

The satin fan with painted face,
The hankerschief of cobweb lace,
The scattered violets that lie On shaggy rug of Eastern dye.

The circling cupids overhead,
The china dragons, blue and red,
The whole great, silent, stately room—
Filled, filled with life and soft perfume!

O Love that beams from sapphirine eyes,
How simple art thou, yet so wise!
One touch of thee, and lo! no sun Could ever do what thou hast done.

The curtains part for me to pass Between their "brothered" buds and grass;
I go, and Love, too, goes my way—Sweet perfect Love; with me to stay.

—James Berry Benschel

A Prayer.

God keep you, dearest, all this lonely night—
The winds are still,
The moon drops down behind the western hill—

God keep you safely, dearest, 'till the light, God keep you still when slumber fades away—
For care and strife

Take up new arms to meet our waking life—
God keep you through the battle of the day, God keep you! Nay, beloved soul, how vain

How poor a prayer!
I can but say again and again, God keep you every time and every where.

When to be Born.

Born of a Monday,
Fair of face;
Born of a Tuesday,
Full of good grace;

Born of a Wednesday,
Merry and glad;
Born of a Thursday,
Sour and sad;

Born of a Friday,
Godly given;
Born of a Saturday,
Work for a living;

Born of a Sunday,
Never shall want;
So there's the week
And the end on't.

Marry No Tippler.

How many young ladies there are Who in spite of the wretchedness they See daily resulting from marrying tipplers, Are still willing to run the risk themselves. They can not be brought to believe that the one glass taken now and then will, in nine cases out of ten, increase to three or five, and even more, until the habit has a man in its grasp, as a vice—never to relax its hold, until the wife and family have run through the whole gamut of wretchedness, and death closes the scene.

Shame and sorrow follow in the footsteps of the drinking man as sure as night follows day. Girls often refuse a man because he is poor, or his social position does not please; but how many girls would refuse a rich tippler?

Wealth blinds them to the terrible future which a drunkard will bring them to—wealth can not, however, soothe the pangs of disappointment and disgrace which an intemperate man causes his family.

Girls, take a friend's advice. Reject the hand of a man who will not abstain from the intoxicating cup. Your happiness and respectability in this life, perchance your salvation in the next, are involved in this question. Marry a total abstemious man, though his garments be coarse, his manners a trifle rough; he can cultivate the latter, and when his fortune changes, as change it will, his outward garb can also be improved; and what is there so noble as a young man who has virtue, character, integrity? Only one thing—the girl who has sense enough to appreciate these qualities, and who, by wedding them, insures herself a peaceful and self-respectful life.

The Carrizalillo Mines.

The Carrizalillo mining district, otherwise known as the Stonewall, is showing well as developments are being made. This district lies close to the border line of old Mexico, in the plateau of the Sierra Madre, and from time to time assays made both here and in the East have shown ore of extremely high grade. Native silver, horn silver, and brittle silver forming the valuable mineral constituents of the ore. It is a common idea that rich assays mean small ore bodies, but like many other theories, it is exploded by the crucial test of experience alike in old and New Mexico. There are now on exhibition at the post-office, samples of ore from the Pioneer mine, Stonewall district owned by T. D.
Pettie and O. M. Williams, over thirty pounds in weight and assaying close on $3,000 to the ton, which are well worthy of examination by all interested in the mineral resources of Grant county.

These specimens show native silver, chloride and brittle silver, and represent the mineral just as taken from the vein. Other specimens, equally valuable, owned by the same parties, together with General John Boyle, of St.
Louis, from the Honest Miner are also worth examination as showing the rich and permanent character of the Car-rizalillo ores.—Silver City Mining Chronicle.
